Not illustrated. 1907 Excerpt: .in spite of large changes of the load on the dynamo, due to other circuits, it was possible to prevent the effective current in the filament from changing by more than 0.01 ampere. The current was always 0.8 of an ampere. The ammeter was appreciably more sensitive to small changes in the terminal voltage than a comparably graduated Thomson A. C. voltmeter, because the current shunted through the voltmeter was not negligible in comparison with the current that fed the glower. Among other sources of light the electric arc was given a fair trial and discarded, for two reasons. First, because of the intensity of the carbon and cyanogen bands; and second, because of the inconveniences resulting from its unsteadiness and great emission of heat. For wave-lengths between the strong ultra-violet of the Nernst glower and 0.20/1, a spark discharge in air of about 1 cm. in length was used. One electrode was composed of an alloy of equal parts by weight of cadmium and zinc, and the other was made of sheet brass. The alloy wore away so rapidly that the brass electrode was employed to diminish the mechanical labor attendant upon sparking the terminals. In order to produce a source of ultra-violet light that would have the same intensity from one end of the slit of the spectrograph to the other, for any one wave-length, the electrodes were made in the shape of wedges or chisels, with the sharp edges parallel to the slit....
