Not illustrated. 1918 Excerpt: .From Winton eastward cruisers pass east and north to Basswood Lake and Hunter s Island. Here is a trip that can be made in ten days, can be made better in three weeks, or can be stretched to many summers cruising. From Basswood Lake go east or west along the boundary and the story is the same: lakes, rivers, portages, and always the wilderness. Around the lakes are high, rocky ridges clothed with second growth pine and spruce tion of 110,000 at least 90,000 are fishermen, or belong to families of fishermen. On the north shore through the ore port of Two Harbors, Grand Marais, and on to Port Arthur runs an automobile road like a boulevard. Crossing it at frequent intervals are streams large and small arid in these streams are gamy trout. Of course the 90,000 fishermen have done much business with the nearer streams, but three hours of even moderate motor car speed will bring you to places where the fish are unsophisticated and obliging. This is easy fishing. The real country lies beyong the Range. In Duluth parlance, the Range is the iron country lying seventy miles to the north. Here unbelievable fortunes of iron ore have been scooped out of the gaping earth with steam One word of caution. When you talk, with the natives, look up the place on the map. The cheerful Chippewa named this country and what he didn t know about spelling would have been an awful...
